Preview information

The Lawrence University women's team has a stellar core of swimmers as it looks to move up from its fourth-place finish at the Midwest Conference Championships in 2013.

Lawrence boasts former conference champions in senior Hannah Gabriel and junior Taylor Winter. Gabriel has won twice in the 200-yard freestyle, and Winter was a champ in the 500 freestyle.

Sophomores Emily Flack and Hayley Cardinal and freshman Paige Witter are some of the top swimmers in the league in their events. Flack is a contender in the backstroke events, while Cardinal is tough in the breaststroke and individual medley and Witter is one of the league's best in the butterfly. Senior Chelsea Hameister also gives the Vikings another strong freestyler and a valuable member of the relay teams.

With this group leading the way, Lawrence also will be a contender in all of the relay events.

On the men's side, Lawrence brings a small contingent to the championships looking to improve upon a fifth-place finish in 2013.

Seniors Charlie Mann and Evan Flack will lead the way for the Vikings. Mann is a contender in the backstroke events and in the freestyle sprints. Flack also is a top freestyle sprinter for the Vikings and will be a key member of the relay teams.

Junior Stephen Salansky is a versatile swimmer who could contend in the breaststroke events and will be a strong swimmer on the relays.
